Company Background

BOLDplanning has served the preparedness planning needs of state and local emergency management agencies, public safety organizations, schools and universities and private companies since 2004.

Initially, the company focused on GIS, mitigation and risk assessment consulting for public safety agencies. It became clear from these early experiences, preparedness planning as a practice was not as efficient or effective as it could be. Plans were paper based and housed in three-ring binders in unsecured locations. Updating and maintaining plans were tedious and time-consuming tasks. Hard-copy documents quickly became obsolete, impacting their usefulness in a crisis.

Sensing a need in the market, the BOLDplanning team set out to create an online software solution that would replace paper-based binders. The resulting online platform made plans easier to edit, maintain and share across stakeholders in the event a plan was activated. This digital tool, coupled with expert consulting, proved to be a successful combination, fulfilling a need for a wide range of agencies and organizations.

Today, BOLDplanning works with clients in a variety of capacities. Frequently, the company implements planning programs that include expert consulting, a powerful online planning platform and an ongoing exercise and training regimen.

Its consulting team includes internationally accredited Certified Business Continuity Planners (CBCPs), Certified Healthcare Professional Continuity Planners (CHPCPs), FEMA certified continuity professionals and IAEM Certified Emergency Managers (CEMs).

The company also offers specific expertise and software modules for healthcare preparedness planning that help facilities and practices meet stringent new Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) requirements.
